

KRÖLLER-MÜLLER MUSEUM SCULPTURE GARDEN

1995 - ongoing, Otterlo, the Netherlands

The Kröller-Müller Museum is one of the most pronounced sculpture gardens in Europe. This is due not only to its collection, but also to its setting in a National Park. The growing visitor flow and the increasing volume of the outdoor collection produced a need for a revision of the complete environment of the museum. West 8 implanted the concept of a four-season sculpture garden, and a large extension of the sculpture garden. The surrounding park was re-arranged into various specific environments that offer differentiated contexts in which the collection can be exhibited.
